Senator Randy Baumgardner.

A primer on cannabis legislation.

By William Breathes

It's already been a busy year for cannabis proposals in Colorado, with a number of different ideas — ranging from optional employee training to a third attempt at setting a blood-THC driving limit — on the legislative table. And there are going to be more to come, including proposals enabling Colorado's recreational cannabis industry, once the governor-appointed Amendment 64 Implementation Task Force finishes its work at the end of February. But to bring you up to speed in the meantime, we've put together a primer on the four major pieces of cannabis legislation proposed so far in 2013.

1. Senator Randy Baumgardner is serious about not burning marijuana plants. He doesn't really care how you choose to smoke your herb, though; he's more concerned with not burning down the town where it's growing. So concerned, in fact, that he wants to tap into the confidential Department of Public Health and continued on page 10
